Election Approaching

It has already been two years since the current Tribal Council was elected to represent the Quechan people, which means it is time to head back to the polls and do it all over again.

The Quechan Tribal Council passed a series of official Resolutions beginning in early September, appointing five Tribal members to form an Election Board to oversee the December General Election. At the end of October, the Board included Judge Starla M. Cachora, Election Board Marshal Cody I. Hartt; two Clerks; Cheyenne Escalanti and Yvonne Summers; with Deborah Villicaña as the Primary Alternate.

Since being seated, the Quechan Election Board has been hard at work following the procedures set out in the Quechan Election Ordinance, posting a timeline of events connected to the election as well as deadline notices for the submission of nominating petitions. Two important dates on that timeline have already passed. The first was having the ballot box retrieved from the Quechan Police Department safe and delivered to the Quechan Tribal Council chamber. There, the box was unsealed before the witnesses present and the ballots and tally sheets from the December 2012 election were removed.

After the official witnesses

The Quechan Tribal Council carefully observed as Marshal Cody I. Hartt of the Quechan Election Board unlocked, unsealed and emptied the official ballot box in the Council Chambers on October 16. Once Judge Starla M. Cachora had all of the materials left over from the December 2012 election sealed in evidence bags, the empty ballot box was resealed for this year's general election. signed the affidavit certifying the ballot box is now empty, both the lower chamber (for absentee ballots) and the upper chamber (for use at the polling place on Election Day) were relocked and resealed.

The next day, the Board posted an eligible voters list as determined by the Enrollment Office, which is still subject to correction. The final corrected eligible voters list will be posted at the Tribal Office, Pipa Market and Community Center on Tuesday, November 18.

Right now, another important deadline looms, with Wednesday, November 5th being the last day the Election Board will accept requests for special needs accommodations or voter assistance at the polls. If you or someone in your family might want assistance, you have until 5:00 PM that day to meet with the Election Board at their office behind Fish and Game make your needs known.

Those wishing to run for office have until 5:00 PM on Friday, November 21, 2014 to turn in their nominating petitions to Tribal Council Secretary Alexis Summerfield. Those petitions must be signed by at least 10 enrolled adult Tribal members at least 18 years old at the time they sign the petition.

In the meantime, the Election Board is holding voter/candidate information meetings every Tuesday and Wednesday evening at the Election Board office until the week of Thanksgiving. The two hour information sessions begin at 5:00 PM.

Next Tuesday is the Veterans Day holiday. That leaves only Wednesday, November 5th this week, Wednesday, November 12 next week, plus November 18 and 19 the following week, if you wish to attend. And remember: if you have questions about any of this, call the Election Board at (760)572-0664.

A Visit With Actor Saginaw Grant

As Recounted by Contemporary Native Artist Pascha Nierenhausen

Quechan Tribal member Pascha Nierenhausen received a special, personal honor at last month's 2014 CRIT Pow Wow in Parker, when she developed a quick bond with the well-known public figure and native elder, Saginaw Grant.

Her special connection with the veteran actor began at a meet and greet put together as part of that weekend's Nativisions Film Festival.

"Saginaw Grant is no different than any other elder I've met or spent time with," according to Pascha. "I honor and warmly greet all the elders. With that said, I had asked to take some pictures with him and my fellow Quechan tribal members and family. And very soon after, I and Manfred Scott found that Saginaw had sat down to view the CRIT festivities with us!"

She says that Saginaw was most intrigued and entertained, as he enjoyed his time with them on a wondrous and beautiful night in Parker, Arizona. "I never would have guessed I would have such a kinship with him within seconds of our meeting, even though, at first, there were no words spoken," she recalls. "Naturally, the first thing I asked was if he was ok — did he have enough to eat and drink, was he comfortable or was he tired and wanting to head back to his hotel? But he said he was okay, and right away, we just began to soul talk."

"For over an hour, we talked about his career as a writer; which he tells me is his utter passion, as well as being a native actor. He also revealed his plans to write a play, which would have him engaging with children surrounding him on stage, as he tells stories. He told me of the utter importance of our Native American Culture — how it is imperative to learn and practice our roots, to instill it within our children so it permeates our tribal communities."

"I was a little native girl, sitting beside my elder while absorbing his testimony on life; Saginaw began to pour his soul into my lap, revealing profound realities and challenging my thinking—and he was determined to ignore the negativity and embrace the positives, to make life simple." Pascha says his message seeped in to saturate her blood.

She was so taken with his personality and the easy connection they shared that she asked him to visit our Quechan tribe. He said that he is interested, if it fits in his schedule.

And so, the beautiful evening ended with the lingering aroma of frybread and the sounds of tribal members dancing, singing and laughing all around.

As he got ready to head in for the night, Mr. Grant asked Pascha to help him with his paperwork, and she walked with him to his car. She says that once she helped him get his papers safely into the car, "He had decided to gift me with a few items, and we hugged and we bid peace to one another — 'Til next time, see you on the Red Road in Amerika,' were Saginaw's final words as he closed the door."

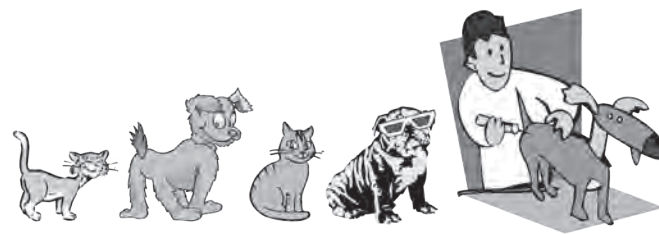

"Life is simple, it is the being that makes life hard with the wrong choices in life."

The members of the Quechan Ah Keel Dance Group made a quick trip of over 1000 miles during the first week of October, to attend and compete in two of the big Native cultural events that always take place at this time of year.

They first headed northeast to take in the Navajo Elder Fest in Farmington, New Mexico, enjoying both cooler weather and a change of scenery to take part in one of the largest autumn gatherings in the Four Corners area each year.

There, they performed the Quechan Harvest Dance (the Ah-Keel) for the Dineh people and their guests. Group leader Arlie Emerson explained that they formed to preserve the fall traditions of the Kwatsáan Pipá, singing songs and performing dances which give thanks for the Harvest.

"It is the season to pick vegetables and crops that were planted earlier and are now ready to be harvested," dancer Gail Johns explained, when asked about their trip. "Such as pumpkin, squash, fruits, vegetables, wheat, corn, and a variety of beans. In performing these dances, the Ah Keel Dance Group are doing their interpretation of the Harvest."

Though their tight schedule limited their stay in Navajo country to only two days and a night, they were able to give a complete performance there. They were even able to compete in a couple of dance contests, before circling back around to take in the CRIT Pow Wow in Parker on the way home.

There, they met up with many more Quechan Tribal members who had also traveled north to take part in the festivities.

The Ah Keel dancers signed up for the Saturday, October 4th evening dance contests, and did quite well despite having to compete against local notables such as Roland Golding and the current Miss Cocopah, Santana Salazar.

The current Miss Native San Pasqual Elementary and Middle School Princesses, Marianna Shepard and Teresa Valenzuela also appeared at the Pow Wow, marching in the morning Grand Entry with Native Royalty from all over the southwest.

When it was over, Shirley Hart and Gail Johns had taken the first and third place cash prizes (respectively) in the Women's age 55 Bird Dancing

Have You Bought a Baby Tortoise? Here Are a Few Things You Should Know:

Quechan Fish and Game Officer Travis Owl says he noticed an Indian Days vendor offering cute little tortoise hatchlings as pets, which a few Tribal members took a real shine to. He says that those little reptiles were African Sulcata Tortoises, which is also known as the African Spurred Tortoise.

Although they can make great pets, these animals can present significant challenges. They grow up to be the third largest tortoise in the world, averaging 3 feet long and weighing up to 200 lbs. Oh - and they can live up to 150 years, so you could be passing them down to your great grandchildren!

They require large enclosures where they can dig burrows up to 10 ft. deep. They need temperatures above 60°F and grass bedding, and should be fed very minimal fruit or sugary foods. Their natural diet primarily consists of many types of grasses and plants which are high in fiber and very low in protein: something like the arrowweed, grasses and scrub brush around here. Due to their high dietary fiber needs, grasses normally form at least three-quarters of their daily food intake.

Prickly pear cactus pads, hibiscus leaves, hay from various grasses, and dandelions are generally safe. Some common garden plants, such as azaleas, are toxic to tortoises.

Yes, they're cute now, but African Sulcata Tortoises can grow up to three feet long, weigh up to 200 lbs, and live for 150 years.

The Sulcata Tortoise is a voracious animal that will often overeat, and may require calcium supplements, since the soil here is different from that of the southern saharan and sahel regions they are native to.

However, coming from areas like Ethiopia and Chad, the weather and other conditions here agree with them. However: DO NOT RELEASE THESE ANIMALS INTO THE WILD, as they could present negative effects on the local environment, overwhelming the native desert tortoises. The males of this species are very aggressive, and will fight to the death!

If you find you can no longer care for your pet Sulcata Tortoise, call Quechan Fish & Game at (760) 572-0544 and have them come pick it up.

Meet The New Miss Quechan and Her First Attendant

The newly crowned Miss Quechan Nation for 2014/15 is Miss Diamond Marie Rivera.

An enrolled member of the Quechan Tribe,

Diamond is a descendant of the Quechan, Kumeyaay, and Cocopah tribes. She is the daughter of Rose Phipps and the late Edwin Rivera. Her maternal grandparents are Gwendolyn Murphy of the Quechan and Kumeyaay tribes and Geraldo Moreno of the Cocopah Tribe.

Diamond is currently a freshman at Arizona State University and she is majoring in exercise and wellness.

She has a long-time love of dance, and has been competing in native dance competitions since she was a child. Diamond trained in hip-hop, jazz and contemporary dance styles throughout her middle school and high school years, and enjoys going to dance conventions and learning new routines. She also enjoys traveling to different gatherings and powwows to participate in traditional dance contests and peon tournaments.

"I love going to gatherings and pow wows because I am passionate about my culture and am proud that I can go to these functions and participate and have fun dancing next to my friends and family," she says.

Continuing with her introduction, Diamond explains what motivates her: "Helping out in the community is something I encourage because it's a learning opportunity. It's an opportunity to learn about your surroundings and the people around you."

She also says that, "Helping different tribes and my tribe is rewarding because I always come back learning something new about my people and my people's past."

"I like to think that I am a good role model to my siblings and to younger people because I try my best in everything I do and am not afraid of a challenge. My challenges include being the first in my family to go to university, and continuing to be drug and alcohol free in a community that's well-known for drugs and alcohol. I don't give in to peer pressure because I stop and think how this is going to benefit me and affect the goals I have for the future."

Her goals include graduating from ASU with a bachelor's in exercise and wellness so she can attend graduate school to become a physical therapist.

As the runner-up from this year's pageant, Maricela Barley now becomes the First Attendant to Miss Quechan Nation, ready to step into the role of Miss Quechan if Diamond Rivera is unable to complete her term for any reason.

An enrolled member of the Quechan Tribe, Maricella is descended from both the Quechan and Cocopah Tribes. She is 21 years old and the oldest of seven children. Maricella grew up here on the reservation, where she played on the San Pasqual High varsity volleyball team all four years, graduating as one of the top 10 of her class.

She is the proud daughter of Marlon Barley Sr. and Aracely Le-Roy, while her paternal grandparents are Marlow Barley Sr. and the late Marveen Brown. Her great-grandparents are the late Fritz Brown and the late Alice Brown, along with the late Owen Barley and the late Delores Barley.

She says that she doesn't know where she would be in this life if she did not have all those amazing and strong role models in her family.

Currently employed by the Quechan Tribe, she has been working at Quechan Social Services for a little over a year. She says there is no greater joy than assisting her fellow tribal members in any way she can. She also hopes to earn a degree in secondary education from NAU to give back to her community.

Social Services Adds Nickki Miguel, General Assistance Eligibility Worker

Over this past summer, the Quechan Social Services Department hired Tribal member Nickki Miguel as their General Assistance Eligibility Worker.

Nickki had previously served at Social Services for five years in 2008, serving as a G.A. Eligibility Worker for two of those years. During that time she says she gained a great deal of experience under the tutelage of the Social Services Director at the time, Ms. Marilyn Swafford.

"I enjoyed my first years here working alongside the other staff members," she says, "but due to the way Program Funding and Grants change, I was placed in a different tribal department for quite some time."

Nickki says the vagaries of federal funding led to cutbacks when the economy took a nose-dive a few years back, which eliminated quite a few jobs for a while, including hers. But she doesn't feel that time was wasted: "Even though I was out of a job for some time, during my unemployment I was able to spend more time at home with my family," she explains.

She decided to take a journey into the working world again this year, when she found temporary employment in the Tribe's Finance Department.

"Shortly after taking that job, I saw the General Assistance advertisement and I re-applied right away!" she continues.

"After I went through the interview process I was hired as the Eligibility Worker once again, and I'm so very grateful to be back at a job I love."

That job involves more than general clerical duties such as filing, typing and copying documents. This is a highly responsible position intended to provide support to Quechan Tribal members seeking assistance. So, Nickki not only provides and keeps track of all applications for General Assistance, she assists the clients in filling out their applications as well.

The job requires an ability to deal with all kinds of people and personalities in a professional, courteous manner in all kinds of situations. To get the job, Nickki not only had to pass an administrative skills test, she also has to demonstrate mature judgment and the ability to work with minimal supervision on a daily basis.

It's a job that normally calls for a college level education. That could mean Nickki may be looking to pursue future courses working towards an Associate's Degree in General Business (or something similar) as she moves up in her career at Social Services.

Saying she is "A very proud enrolled member of the Quechan Tribe," Nickki grew up here on the reservation, where she attended the San Pasqual schools.

"My parents are Kathleen Miguel and the late Nathan Nerva," she tells the Quechan News. "I did leave for some time to attend the Sherman Indian High School in Riverside, California, where I met numerous tribal members of other nations. And while I did enjoy my experience as a Sherman student, I was also happy to return home to continue my education back at San Pasqual where I was a member of the Strong Hearts Native Society, so I was able to graduate here at home as a Warrior."

Soon after graduating, Nickki began working for Quechan Social Services through the WIA/DOL Program. She then spent 2 years as a temporary office worker for the Tribe.

"I love working here," she says. "I would love to continue my education in Human Services, but right now my main focus is helping our Tribal members as they become more self-sufficient. I would like to thank all my family, friends, coworkers and fellow tribal members who have encouraged me to be where I am in life today."

PAGEANT NIGHT IMAGES

QUECHAN NEWS Photos By William Isbell

This year, the Miss Quechan Nation Pageant was held on Friday evening under the stars on the main stage area at the Evergreen Park: perhaps this is the start of a new more natural, "back-to-the earth" tradition for the year's premier event!

For her talent, pageant winner Diamond Rivera demonstrated the tactics used in playing Peon.

The outgoing Miss Quechan, Gina Rivera said goodbye to the crowd in the cool evening air.

Quechan Tribal Court Judge Claudette White was the Mistress of Ceremonies for the pageant.

Frank Venegas, Commander of Quechan Post 802 marched at the head of the visiting royalty and traditional singers for the night's pageant, to open the event by raising the flag to an honor song.

Each contestant gave an excellent introductory speech on their background and education.

For the question and answer portion, the contestants dressed in "business casual" this year.

Visiting Tribal royalty included representatives from the Pi and Cocopah Tribes, plus Miss Colorado River Indian Tribes and the San Pasqual Middle School and Elementary Princesses.

Contestant Maricela Barley danced in a variety of traditional styles to demonstrate her talent.

Gina Rivera wrapped up her two terms as Miss Quechan with her final dance before the crowd.

Gina then presented the crown to the Tribe's new royal representative, Miss Diamond Rivera.

Little Faye Short took home the top prize for the best traditional dress competition in the infants to 3 years old age bracket.

Pass the Beans and Stomp the Balloon were two games that found favor with all ages. The 5 to 8 year olds are seen at left trying to keep the beans moving before the music stops, while at right above, Keija and Mariah Koteen of the 13 to 17 age group both rush to be the first to pop Xavier John's balloon.

Sierra Rea takes first place in Don't Spill The Beans for 9-12, while Jaleen Bohannon struggles to keep his bowl of beans on top.

Jayven Wynn was this year's best dressed 4 to 7 year old boy.

The float and students of San Pasqual Elementary School captured the Overall Sweepstakes Prize at the 2014 Indian Days Parade when they stopped in front the judges at the Pipa Market, assembled in the street in the midst of the crowd, to sing and dance to bird songs led by Tribal elder Vernon Smith!

Zion White took the best male dancer prize for ages 13 to 17.

The best traditionally dressed girl in the 4 to 7 years old age bracket was Aubrinna Barley.

One time Miss Quechan for 2006-07, Ana Hartt took the best female dancer, ages 18 to 35.

While the current Miss San Pasqual Middle School, Teresa Valenzuela won the 13-17 prize.

This year's best bird dancer for ladies aged 36 to 55 was Jolita Ameelyenah.

And Shirley Hart danced away with an energetic win over all the ladies aged 56 years and older!

SDPI Begins Indian Days With Exercise And A Healthy Meal

Faron Owl (at left, above) leads a group of Tribal members around the Quechan Diabetes Walking Park during the combined 5K Fun Run and community walk that began the Indian Days weekend on October 10.

The staff of the Quechan Special Diabetes Project for Indians (SDPI) led off the Indian Days festivities once again with a round of morning exercise followed by a good healthy breakfast for everyone involved.

There were three levels of exercise for participants, with all who registered getting a medal at the end for finishing.

Those who are really athletic (like the members of the San Pasqual track team) were able to take part in a 10 kilometer “fun run” heading south out of Evergreen Park, across the Ocean-To-Ocean Bridge, and along the edge of the river. Everyone else could either run at least four circuits to achieve a distance of 5 kilometers around the Walking Park, or perhaps take a leisurely one mile walk, and still get some exercise.

San Pasqual High’s Adam Wong came in first on the 10K run, after which everyone sat down to a healthy breakfast.

Brian Warner of the Special Diabetes Project whipped up a hot oatmeal breakfast for everyone who came out for the morning jog.

Tribal Member Enjoys Craft of Making Beaded Capes

QUECHAN NEWS Photos by William Isbell

One of the booths at the early October Quechan Indian Days celebration featured the work of Christine Lopez, who has really gotten into creating traditional beaded capes.

“I first learned to do beadwork when I started going to the Quechan Senior Center,” she tells the Quechan News.

“During that time I went to a few language conferences, and there was a young man teaching a beading class, which I attended. He said it was called ‘Peach Spring Style’. I really liked the way it looked and that is the style I do now.”

“I enjoy beading very much, and when I see the finished product, I feel proud and honored that I was taught how to bead. I want to thank all the Tribal and non-Tribal visitors for both their nice compliments and for purchasing my capes during the Quechan Indian Days celebration. I also want to thank the people who taught me how to bead.”

SHAKE OUT AT FORT YUMA IHS CLINIC

LCDRs Scott Raisor and Amanda Parris of the Indian Health Service began the 2016 Great American Shake Out drill by ducking, covering and holding on under the IHS conference room table! Q NEWS Photo by William Isbell

The Fort Yuma Indian Health Clinic took part in the Great Shake-Out Earthquake Drill on October 16, 2014, with a pre-recorded “this is only a drill” announcement over their P.A. System at 10:00AM. The drill tested reactions to a 7.2 magnitude shaker similar to the Easter Sunday earthquake of 2010.

The entire staff participated in a “Drop, Cover and Hold-on Drill” at the start of the exercise, before going back to their usual daily interactions with patients. Upper level staff members of the Incident Management Team then reported to the main conference room for a “tabletop exercise” lasting until noon. There, they broke up into two teams and discussed how they would respond to a real life earthquake while on the job. The Team will use the resulting data to improve procedures in maintaining their preparedness. The exercise was overseen locally by LT Kendra Vieira, the Environmental Health Officer/Safety Officer at the Fort Yuma Clinic along with LCDR Amanda Parris of the U.S. Public Health Service, who came down from the Phoenix IHS headquarters precisely for the purpose of guiding the staff through a successful drill.

Congratulations to Miss Quechan

Dear Ms. Rivera,

I would like to congratulate you on your new reign as Miss Quechan 2014-2015.

It was an honor to run alongside you in the pageant. You are a very kind girl, and I am glad someone as genuine as you is now invested with the title of Miss Quechan.

Being Miss Quechan is a very serious decision, but I have all the faith in the world that you will excel in your reign.

Good Luck at ASU and Congratulations.

To my Family and Friends, dress makers, Bird and Pipah Singers, the entire Polk/Smith Family, and pageant committee:

Thank you for helping me prepare for this very important milestone in my life.

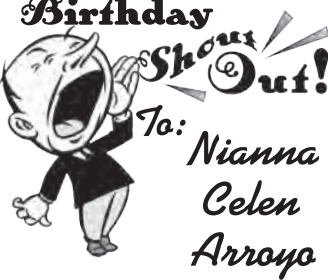

I do not know where I would be if I did not have all of you in my life.

Thank you.

Respectfully, Maricela Barley

Time For A Big Birthday Shout Out!

Happy 7th Birthday on November 29th!

I Love You! ~ Mom
